Some Suggestions for Chief Clerk Rose.

To the Editor of The Evening Star: Yesterday's edition of your paper contained an interesting item showing the system of dis-cipline adopted by Mr. Rose, acting chief clerk of the general land office. By Mr. Rose's method each clerk is compelled to report at the close of the day whether he has been tardy or close of the day whether he has been tardy or has read a newspaper or had any conversation of an unofficial character during office hours. The method is a very good one and Mr. Rose has no doubt good reason to be "gratified with the result" of his system. But with all deference to Mr. Rose's experience in controlling refractory clerks. I venture to offer some amendments—or, rather, additions—to his plan that I believe will improve it. I would suggest that if any clerk reports himself under Mr. Rose's rules twice in one week he consumpt without a continue of other additions—to his plan that I believe there additions—to his plan that I believe twice in one well and an over the third of the property of the plan that I believe there of the four the be detained half an hour after office hours, the growth of the plan that I believe there is no way to great the pelled to show to his parents. The U. S. S. Despatch, which ran on the Assateague Shoals in Friday night's gale, as announced in Saturday's Star, is a complete wrock. The vessel struck two miles south of Sheep's Pen Hill at 3 o'clock Saturday morning. The life-saving crew boarded her at 5:45 a.m. and commenced landing the crew at 9:20 a.m. All hands were saved by the station life boat. Ten trips were made to and from the wrock, finishing at 11 a.m.

Assateague Shoals are sixty miles from Cape Charles, bearing about northeast by north from the Cape Charles light. The sheals lie just off Assateague Island, which almost adjoins Accomac county, on the Maryland boundary of Virginia. Her back is broken and she is listed off shore twenty to thirty degrees. She was in command of Lieut. W. E. Cowles of the navy and had a full complement of seventy-four men on board.

The Despatch left the New York navy yard on Friday and was on her way to this city, where she was to take on board the President,
